He has little red feet
His stockin's in his shoes
Lipstick and rouge on his face

He has his hair piled high
Has a red umbrella
And carries his head in the sky

And I said: "Oh, Rosie
Don't you do that to the boys
Don't you come on so willing
Don't you come on so strong

It can be so chillin'
When you act so willin'
And your warmth sets like the sun"

He has a little baby brother
A big fat mama
His sister asks for dimes on the street

He doesn't feel it's a cover
In fact he knows
For sure he can please

I said he's out there right now
Running with the devil
Struttin' down the alley ways

With the nervous young hopeful
At his heel
And know his satisfaction won't drive him away

And I said: "Oh, Rosie
Don't you do that to the boys
Don't you come on so willing
Don't you come on so strong

It can be so chillin'

When you act so willin'
And your warmth sets like the sun"

He's not looking for a friend
He's not looking for a lover
There in the crowded bar

He has rings on his fingers
He's there to tease
You know he only wants to take things too far

And I said: "Oh, Rosie
Don't you do that to the boys
Don't you come on so willing
Don't you come on so strong

It can be so chillin'
When you act so willin'
And your warmth sets like the sun"

And I said: "Oh, Rosie
Don't you do that to the boys
Don't you come on so willing
Don't you come on so strong

It can be so chillin'
When you act so willin'
And your warmth sets like the sun"

And I said: "Oh, Rosie
Don't you do that to the boys
Don't you come on so willing
Don't you come on so strong

It can be so chillin'
When you act so willin'
And your warmth sets like the sun"
