I'm lost in a world of rusted parts,
unwanted toys and broken hearts.
I've been living with you here for so long my dear,
these clouds will never go away.

All the nights in the past seem to run together,
that I sat with you alone in strange weather,
in a white landscape without a November kiss,
why does my love have to fall like this?

Christina
You left me lying on the couch without you
Christina
How will I ever find my way to you?

The skeletons in my closet seem to dance at your voice.
The monsters under my bed seem to rejoice.
The carcass in my tub falls through the floor,
at the sound of your laughter coming through the door.

My memories are all lies just like your sweet promises,
veiled in black smoking at s?ances.
My hearts a tambourine thatÂ's beating out the name of the girl who will never hear itÂ's song.

You left me lying on the couch without you

How will I ever find my way to you?

And all the leaves outside committing suicide
seem to cry out your name just before they die.
I walk through this wonderland without you again,
wondering how I can still be in love
