No one knows our names, lying in this grave
unmarked,
With no name. Found you lying down by the roadside, half
Ways melted into the ground. Down into the ground.
Come &
Lay me down beside you here in this ground, with five Thousand more. One fifty passed & the hunger is gone now
The feeling remains but the people are stronger. I still Hear you calling out today. I walk past your grave each Night & each morning I still hear the voices of eight Million starving. I still hear you calling out today.
Descended from a line of famine survivors, millions Escaped but how many died though. I still hear you Calling out today.
