Every day, you crawl into the night a fallen angel, with your wings set alight when you hit the ground, everything turns to blue I can't get through the smoke, that's surrounding you

'cause when you're falling
I can't tell which way is down
and when you're screaming somehow I don't hear a sound and when you're seeing things
then your feet don't touch the ground
'cause when you're falling
I can't tell which way is down

I can see through the clouds, I can walk right through the walls
Hang me off the ceiling, but I can't take the fall should I cross the river, when I may get swept away out there on the water, you can still see me wave

'cause when you're falling
I can't tell which way is down
when you're falling
I can't tell which way is down

I can see all those things
My feet don't touch the ground..

'cause when you're falling
I can't tell which way is down
and when you're screaming
and when you're seeing things
then your feet don't touch the ground
'cause when you're falling
I can't tell which way is down

and when you're screaming
