(The following morning)

MADELINE That must be Montresor...

Good morning! Oh, how lovely to see you - since Roderick told me you were coming

I have been so excited.

Now you are here, all will be well once more.

I was not here last night to greet you,

you must think me ill-mannered, but sadly I am not enjoying the good health I used to...

MONTRESOR Yes.

Madeline, I must confess it's hard finding words that say what I feel...

MADELINE Oh, Montresor, you're being solemn and it's all quite uncalled for.

I feel quite sure I'm growing stronger and the doctor agrees with me - so you see all will be well once more.

Five years ago we were a very different family, but how things change!

Roderick and I were both living abroad when father died.

We both returned from Florence to take up Roderick's inheritance.

The House was dark and so full of sadness.

But you know my brother and how sensitive he is.

He lives in the music of his wild melodies.

Now as time went by so his songs grew sadder, now he never smiled as he played.

Now he sings of death and some things even madder;

shuts himself away, brooding to himself,

come to me at night,

staring at my face 'till I fell afraid.

MADELINE MONTRESOR

When I am better we must all

Holiday together

As in the old days. Yes, you know how much I'd love that

You would be good for us both,

As good for us both as before

You look so much the same!

I must confess that you have changed...

Do you remember? Everything.
The fragile hour,
the silent walk with a friend.
MONTRESOR As we walk so we tread
& MADELINE on the words left unsaid
I can't say them no matter how hard I try
We chatter on, then the moment's gone, the one for which I've hoped and I've prayed and I've planned.
Stop the clock's advance!
I need a second chance,
I need that second's glance when my hand touched you hand.
I'd take you in my arms and say 'I love you'
but it won't come back to me.
It's over now,
it's over now,
it's over now, you see.
If I hadn't been afraid to touch you would you have been afraid to fall in love with me?
Would it be over?
Would it be over now?
Perhaps it wouldn't be.
And each hour limits choice in so gentle a voice
'till the hour that we realise no choice remains.
So we await just one chance to cheat our fate, but then if we hesitate we lose the power to act at all.
For once that moment's past we simply stand aghast as life rolls to disaster and we stand and watch it fall.
I'd take you in my arms and say 'I love you'
but I think we both agree.
It's over now,
it's over now, you see.
It's over now,
it's over now, you see.
If I hadn't been afraid to touch you
would you have been afraid to fall in love with me?
Would it be over?
Would it be over now?
Perhaps it wouldn't be.
If I hadn't been afraid to touch you
would you have been afraid to fall in love with me?
Would it be over?
Would it be over now?
The way it seems to be.
(Madeline exits as Usher enters)

USHER MONTRESOR

Yes, she does not know it yet;

Perhaps for the best

So sure she will recover

And so full of life full of life

Full of life,

My brave my brave

Madeline Madeline

This House devours her

so take her from this place

Preparing the final torment

Of it's empty space empty space

A silent, empty space silent empty space

Without

without

Madeline Madeline

Madeline

This is only a house my friend

USHER Which, by dint of long and undisturbed endurance.

by it's mere form and substance, has obtained an influence, a silent yet importunate and terrifying hold which, for centuries, has moulded the destiny of my family and now makes of me whatever it is I am.

The House is Usher and Usher is the House:

the two are indivisible.

It was born with us, prospered with us, suffered too.

And it will, in some way, die with us, soon.

I am the last of the Usher,

mine is the last drop of Usher blood,

The last of the Usher!

The House has told me in midnight breathing from my chamber walls,

the House has told me in the secret murmur of the stones that none can hear save I.

I am the last of the Usher,

my sister's death shall leave me so;

I am the last of the Usher,

so in Usher's House I will wait alone.

MONTRESOR Roderick, this is nightmare talk.

Come back with me, both of you, while you're yet able

You can't stay here and rot!

USHER There will be no rot!

No rot in Usher!

We have lived with thunder, and with thunder shall we fall!

MONTRESOR I cannot make you come but hear what I say.

Send Madeline with me to some healthy place.

USHER No rot! No rot in Usher!
We have lived by lightning and but lightning shall we fall!
No slide into slow decay,
no shrivelling splendour
no gradual ebbing away, no quiet surrender!
No rot! No rot in Usher!
We have lived as Titans and as Titans we must fall!
USHER MONTRESOR
Don't talk of rot
Stop!
No rot in Usher!
Stop!
Roderick, try and calm yourself
Just tell me why I should! this cannot do you good.
These thoughts...
No!
are folly.
No!
Everything I've tried to I have tried to help you Tell you, you've misunderstood I've done everything I could.
Come, why should we fight
This way
We have enough troubles.
What was it we used to say? What was it we used to say?
A problem shared is doubled! A problem shared is doubled!
Ushers do not flee! Ushers to not flee!
Montresors stand firm! Montresors stand firm!
So we stand together, So we stand together,
Stand together stand together
By dint of long
And undisturbed endurance...
we could defeat the House,
my friend.
VOICES OF We shall not
THE HOUSE let him go!
We shall not let him go!
