Jack The Rocketman
Jack the Rocketman
sang a hymn to Pan
with every rocket he made
he would take to outer space
and the great beyond
and the moon it bears his name
and the moon it bears his name

up through the stratosphere he had nothing to fear but the rocket he let go
and now he is no more starlit skies reflecting his third eye for the heavens he wished to go

and now he is no more
Jack the Rocketman sang a hymn to Pan
And now he is no more
And now he is no more.
Now he is he is no more.

(Instrumental section)
Burned in the silence room
Burned in the silence room
Burned in the silence room

Jack the Rocketman
sang a hymn to Pan
with every rocket he made
and the great beyond

And now he is no more
And now he is no more.
Now he is he is no more.
Now he is no more.
Now he is no more.

The Rocket man is no more
The Rocket man is not more
Jack the Rocketman
