"Summer Snow"

Unexpectedly, You came back to see
If I'd be waiting, like I promised long ago
Your shadow filled the room
The music played the tune
When I saw you, you were standing at the door

Like summer snow
You were an unexpected sign
A blazing sun, you came shining through the night
When I really should have known that you'd be coming home, home

I waited patiently, I found it hard to see
If you were coming, why was there such a long delay?
At times I thought you lied,
Or else you would have tried
To let me know that you'd be coming back again

Like summer snow, it falls around me in the cold
I can feel the echoes of the warnings I was told That I should know, that you'd be coming home, home home home
