Do you feel so small on Sunday afternoon?
In your loveless house full of empty rooms
Once a place of life, once upon a time
Flames are dying out while ghosts move in Crossing on the stair, sleep in empty chairs
Tell me, are you lonely? Are you lonely?

And if we believe wisdom comes with years
As knowledge stings our eyes, the easier the tears
Cradled in the sadness, a heart that ever aches
I'm praying with all mine, I won't make the same mistakes
Are the dark seeds there in the blood we share
Tell me are you lonely? Are you lonely?

While love lives, while sun set
While snow moons rise in November skies
While ties bind, while souls cry
While oceans ride in an endless tide
While love grows, while blood flows
While truth is real you need never feel alone

What seems to hurt the most is giving up the ghost
So tell me are you lonely? Are you lonely?
Are you lonely? Are you lonely?
