she says she only looks at boys who look like me, am i supposed to feel good?
she says she's only touched by boys who feel like me, the kind who make her feel understood and when i leave her home she's having parties in my head
while i'm in some hotel room in the midwest with a book i've already read

should i look the other way?
i can't laugh until this feeling passes, stare my fears in the face talk me down

living here in this town you hear stories that make it hard to sleep promises of fifteen years are broken in five minutes on a strangers sheets i just want to buy my girl some quiet, a place in nyack but tonite i'm working four sets at the black thorn breaking my back

'cause i don't wanna believe, the love in your eyes ain't just for me
woman i gotta be the only one privy to your arms

the face

wont you help me?
please, please talk me down
