Phil Joel "My Generation"

Feel the flames in the moonlight Feel the warmth from the campsite There is no reason to fear No one's alone here

Memories never stray too far West coast summers, our first cars We were kings, this was our kingdom But like soldiers to war we were sent So many things called us away And I saw the tail lights fade

Watch you walking away It's driving me crazy It's my generation Watch you walking away It's driving me crazy It's my generation

Feel the flames in the moonlight Growing up, our spirits so high We had the fire and we felt the same How did things get so strange? Fuel the fire, gotta fan the coals What will become of our souls?

Better to look a fool and still say this Close your eyes to the world's infatuations You know the truth And I wish you were here tonight
