sugar sugar honey pumpkin pie baby if you leave I guess you'll die sugar sugar honey can't you see you can't live without me maybe there was maybe there wasn't once a woman who had men a dime a dozen swett as honey and soft as pumpkin pie handsome to the eye snapped her fingers and swiftly one would come she had tempting riches and a body no man could dream of

chorus

to her castle she'd lead them one by one enchant their poor souls with enticing kisses give me love and I will give you gold they were told the story goes she'd take them by the hand and show them her own little promised land but as soon as her love would try to leave her evil eyes would speak

I am told she was a real-life witch with powders and potions to mix and as soon as her love would try to leave her evil he'd receive
