How could she pick up bones of her children
Those little lives scattered at her feet
You can call it any name you can think of

Today I feel sure it's them or me
Today I feel sure, today I feel sure it's them or me

I'm scared of all these wide-open spaces
I'm scared of what I see in people's eyes
I try to see the best in each and every man
Find shelter in the hope and not the lies

Today I feel sure, today I feel sure it's them or me
Where are you now?

When the bullet reaches out, and steals into the crowd
I recognise the choice that we have now
And I see that they are alone, would trade the kingdom
For the throne
And celebrate the God in every coward

Today I feel sure, today I feel sure it's them or me
Where are you?
