It was a plane ride from LAX to O'Hare
And what happened next was a series of unfortunate events
(Please stay tuned for what happened next...)
The life I breathe for you gives to me new wounds Well to patch and dress as I reflect on what else I could give you

Maybe I should blindly throw my faith
Into the next thing that comes my way
Standing at the back door with the life that she left behind
Are we all the same behind the frame
Beneath the glass and fake last names?
I've been waiting far too long to feel the sun on my back

It was a big bang
And a bright white light from no where It turned my coach class window to A first class seat on the evening news, on NBC
The life I gave for you is yours
So keep it, you oughtta keep it
If I had one last chance to take it all back
You know I'd take take take you

Maybe I should blindly throw my faith
Standing at the back door with the life that she left behind
Are we all the same behind the frame between the glass and fake last names?
I've been waiting far too long to feel the sun on my

"Apologies are all we'll ever be," she said
Standing on the stairs
Looking back, looking hard at me
"Well, life is long for those who have to wait," I said It's the choice I had to make The choice I had to make It's the choice I had to...

(Make)

It was a plane ride (plane ride)

It was a plane ride (plain ride)

It was a plane ride

Just a plane...

Maybe I should blindly throw my faith

Standing at the back door with the life that I'd left behind

If we know the way we're gonna die

Through everything else we will survive

I've been waiting far too long to feel the sun on my

Yeah

But one day

I will stay
