The walls of my whole world came crashing down,
But I was hanging on by a memory of when you were still around.

I hope your soul is resting safe and sound,
'Cause this is where I am, in a lonesome rivertown.

Summer's turned it's back and left for good,
It'll never feel the same or make me smile again, that much is understood.

I hope your soul is resting safe and sound,
'Cause this is where I am, in a lonesome rivertown.

What it is, what it is, you know I just can't say,
But it shuts my dreams out and I'm feeling like it's here
to stay.

Pull me back, pull me back, and I swear I'll change,
Just give me a chance to reach you and I'll tell you why I ran away.

And you can tell me:

That everything's gonna be fine, someday,
And everything's gonna be all right, just wait.
And everything's gonna be fine, someday,
And everything's gonna be all right.

I once believed this day would never come,
It always haunted me but, still, I couldn't see what it meant to lose someone.

I hope your soul is resting safe and sound,
'Cause this is where I am, in a lonesome rivertown.

What it is, what it is, you know I just can't say
But it shuts my dreams out and I'm feeling like it's here
to stay.

Pull me back, pull me back, and I swear I'll change,
Just give me a chance to reach you and I'll tell you why I ran away.

And you can tell me:

That everything's gonna be fine, someday
And everything's gonna be all right, just wait
And everything's gonna be fine, someday

And everything's gonna be all right, we're all right now.

I see your face everytime I look in the mirror, oh.
Well tell me what it is to do to see you a bit clearer,
please just tell me:
Everything's gonna be fine, someday,
And everything's gonna be all right, just wait.
And everything's gonna be fine, someday,
And everything's gonna be all right, we're all right now.
We're all right now, we're all right now.
