I saw you playing at the pill arcade
It was a downer day, not like yesterday
On roofs we sang sad melodies
And in the slow decay, the showers came

We learned to make no judgment
No more barricades, every touch I made
Melted the bony marrow of our masquerade
To shades of grey and I

And I, told you what was true
And I found the dark in you.
And I felt this kind of blue
And I found the dark in you

When the morning came we were still wide awake
Feeling shivers we hate start to gravitate
And the water we drank we still felt the taste
Of the fire made in our altered state, but I

Never went back no I never went back
Took this heart of mine, and let it die
No I never went back no I never went back
Wrapped up in lace, is my own lie and I

And I, told you what was true
And I found the dark in you.
And I felt this kind of blue
And I found the dark in you
