grew up in the back woods of a small town -- my home town sneak out through the back yard, where the boys would be waiting around and we'd go creeping and the night was our time oh i remember the way that the moon would shine and all of the mischief done and the lessons learned the times i kicked on through and the times i was burned and it's not so far that i can't see they're still a part of me chorus

it's the highest high it's the paths we fly it's an unpaved road, it's a rocky ride and all i can do is shake my head from side to side she must have been four years older, i was so young -- just fourteen i saw her staring at me, it was a look i hadn't ever seen she said be ever so slow as she came around oh i remember the way that she lay me down and all of the wonder and the mystery as i glimpsed the man that i would learn to be and she's not so far that i can't find her with me all the time

and i'm still keeping time to the things i've left behind i fill up the tank as i head west out of town i turn the radio up to my favorite sound a guitar strumming with the sound of the wheels on highway 9 and i wonder -- will i remember this day for the rest of time?
