Mercury dances in it's skyscraper cell
Rising and falling like rhapsody
And I see Winter Broken like lace
In time for a celebration

Thaw wails inside the walls and laughs in the corners
Delighting in it's evident victory
Till I feel springtime counting it's days of flaunting a novel sensation

Like it's leaving
Leaving behind the weight
Vying for yesteryear
Leaving promises in it's wake
Whispering my love
You're still here

You're still here

Hold onto your memories of sun, dogs and rainbows
As time writes a premature eulogy
And I feel summertime passing in haste
Like running out of patience

Quilted with knit and umbrellas and scarfs
And a mild understanding of irony
I feel Autumn leaving the race
All done with the exhilaration

It's leaving
Leaving behind the weight
Vying for yesteryear
Leaving promises in it's wake
Whispering my love
You're still here

You're still here

Mercury dances in it's skyscraper cell
Rising and falling in harmony
And I feel Winter stealing my days
To herald another creation
