i got the clock face down i guess i slept all day just so i could be awake right now i'm flying south with a running start from the roof of my house you have to see it to believe it go get your camera and receive it hey i recognize that sky it's security's friend watching out for a false goodbye i should have painted all the windows disconnect one eye when a wish floats by we can be frozen like chandeliers hang from the ceiling when no one's here no i don't enjoy this view it's a fractured flow and sometimes it goes like you and you cannot erase what it claims speaking in riddles not names the uniqueness of the bleakness like a gifted child, i'm lifted charmed with a capital "I" it's a symbol for you, i bet you're not sure exactly why i make it hard for you don't i will i see two sides from you or won't i i can see this lucky iceberg no expression turning backwards

we can be frozen like chandeliers it's hard to applaud for these twisted speeches disguising a fist from the hand that reaches out a gesture for me, a gesture for us but i won't be on this tragic bus ride forever and i don't need a lever to lean on before i can drop out nice and fast remember to laugh, remember the first unforgettable carpet ride we had don't say it's too bad, cause if there's anything bad it's sucking the water from our public domain only thing you get stuck with a one brief take when the world isn't safe for you we try for you

for you
