So you think you're pretty cool
The exception to the rule
As the keeper of the fuel
You should've known
It wouldn't last you

And you're hardly getting wise
To the problems you surmise
And as the lightning leaves your eyes
You should've known
It wouldn't last you

Well, let the hours fly
Well, as the demons play
And you're paralyzed

And when did it begin?
When you started to give in
To the prickle of the pin
You should've known
It wouldn't last you

And you think you know the score
As you shut another door
You search around for more
You should've known
It wouldn't last you

It's such a sad demise
For your saving grace
Now you realize

Somehow everything will
Somehow everything will
Be a little different than you thought
Somehow everything will
Somehow everything will
Be a little different than you thought
Than you thought

It's such a sad demise
For your saving grace

And now you realize

Lights are fading low
And the candle losing glow
And who are you to know
You should've known
It wouldn't last you

Now you lock yourself inside
And you do your best to hide
On a roller coaster ride
You should've known
It wouldn't last you

Somehow everything will
Somehow everything will

Somehow everything will
