Caged
You hold so tight, until your knuckles show
Escape
As far away as you could ever know

You sink them all down
And watch them float up
Until the wheel has spun around
You will be bound by what you are

You stand in the corner
With your face stripped of color
For what?

If you want to be a passenger
Climb aboard with me, we're leaving now
Step outside and see another world
Only if you want to be a passenger

Chained
So many places you'd prefer to be
Then framed
By a picket fence and salary

You sink them all down
Then watch them float up
Until the wheel has spun around
You will be bound by who you are

You're tied to the corner
With your hope twisted under
In knots

If you want to be a passenger
Climb aboard with me, we're leaving now
Step outside and see another world
Only if you want to be a passenger
