I take love into my hands Journey back to winter land Cut my losses, grow my hair See some man to take me there

As it gets so uncertain When the girl gets too near It's never as good as I hoped Or as bad as I feared

Some seek sleek and slithering charms Out of reach their grasping arms Our skin like milk, our breath of words Like happy, awful and absurd

You know it's always out here in my head When stupid bloody things get said Then drifting on a summer pond I notice that my love has gone
