Oh my sweet dream catcher Won't you give me something, something worth dreaming of?
I am fading faster than a new born babe in his mother's loving arms.
Softly close my eyes, follow you into the dark
With the safety of your moon beams and your plastic carbon stars
Darling I'm content to drink you up

Oh my sweet dream catchers give me something worth dreaming of.

Oh my sweet dream catcher won't you steal my memories once more Yeah my old collection has gathered dust and scattered 'cross the floor
All the lessons I have learned just to be forgotten Wore me down so many times that I no longer want them Won't you paint me a picture of a king and queen in love

Oh my sweet dream catcher give me something worth dreaming of.

Oh my sweet dream catcher won't you cradle me tonight
I am waiting for you like a baby sparrow ready to take flight
Shoot me like a cannonball flying through the sky Angels move the fetters as the lullaby unwinds Tweedle-Dee and Tweedle-Dum are making Alice cry While lovers spin like pendulums on the telephone line

I'm afraid I've learned too much today, I'm ready to let go Disregard the details of this strange elusive world.
I'm ready to be green again, I'm ready to forget Shake me like a puppet, I'll be your marionette
And don't wake me up until I reach that mountain top

Oh my sweet dream catchers give me something worth
dreaming of.

Something worth dreaming of Something worth dreaming of Give me something, something worth dreaming, something worth dreaming
Give me something, something worth dreaming,
something worth dreaming
Give me something, something worth dreaming,
something worth dreaming
Give me something, something worth dreaming of,
Something worth dreaming of
