Sunsets with shooting stars light photographs of what we are,
Claiming to imperfection with the silence that's broken
Beneath our waking hearts and our trembling hands
The lights save up; diminish down.
Don't wait now they can never stop us.
Well make a scene and they'll crowd us.
Everyones watching, everyones saying,
You don't belong here. I just say they're jealous Forget the world and come with me. Well go as fast as we can.
No well never stop until we reach our homes back in the east coast.
We rode off into the sunset like we owned it
