Look around, I'm surrounded by people
Wondering where I went wrong,
Hearing voices telling me boy
You're just not that strong.
I'm entwined in a web of confusion,
Counting dreams to one day carve in shote.
It's these vines that I have broken,
Falling to the ground.

So let me go and let me see
And let me find myself again.
And all these walls,
I tear them down and I move on.
So let me go and let me see
And let me find out finally
And I pray no more violence entwines me,
No more violence.

Staring deep inside this member,
Trying to figure out whose staring back a guess
That I haven't decided where my heart is at.
Strange emotion, labels as be,
And may both my hands,
My feet and my soul to a place
I never thought of but I'm glad to go.

So let me go, let me see and let me find myself again.
And all theses walls I tear them down and I move on.
So let me go and let me see and let me find out finally,
And I pray no move violence entwines me, entwines
me,
So count me in, I'll stand up right, I'll wait my turn but I will burn.
And at this stage, I'm paranoid, about these choices, I have chosen.
So let me go and let me be from all this torment
All these games and now my turn, I'll stand my ground,
So let me go and let me see and let me find myself
again
And all these walls, all these walls, I'll tear them down.
So let me go and let me see and let me find out finally.
I swear that I'm already on my way,

Cause I'm afraid, I'm a fool now, again!

So let me go, let me go, go, go!
