Staring at the empty room
Was there ever a reason to stay
Strangely familiar this whole place feels
She doubts herself again
She fears that today might finally be, be the day

She's packing up her memories, just a few things she should keep
It doesn't even pay for her to bring such torn and tattered things
Glistening tears surround the truth
She doubts herself again
A meaningless collection and all the pain it brings

Have the streets always been this cold at night
Suffering hearts would know
Has she really been alone this time
Letting sorrow grow
Is she gonna make it out tonight
Hard to clear her mind
Let go of what she thought was right
And leave despair behind

Control her trembling fingers, she fumbles with the key She's trapping all the things inside she'll never have to see
Her shallow breathing fills the hall
She doubts herself again
She's tells herself it is the day that she will be free

Have the streets always been this cold at night
Suffering hearts would know
Has she really been alone this time
Letting sorrow grow
Is she gonna make it out tonight
Hard to clear her mind
Let go of what she thought was right
And leave despair behind

Step into the morning glare
Contrast to the day

Sunlight brings her back to life
She doubts she'll come again
She drops her things down on the ground and slowly walks away

Staring at the empty room
Was there ever a reason to stay
Was there ever a reason to stay
Strangely familiar this whole place feels
Strangely familiar this whole place feels
She doubts herself again
Today is today
Today is the day

She doubts she'll come again
She doubts she'll come again
She doubts she'll come again
She doubts herself again
