Above the waves, Going under

Corrinado swam like hell on fire
With jelly arms and beaten bones
He rode the crests, he broke the waves Trying to get a breath of air for all that he had left to save

Mulberry let the engines burn
The airship lifting off the ground
He watched the sea, could not believe That he thought Corrinado could be free, his life was now in vain

All was left one chance to fly away
He spun, he heard a gasping sound
But he did not see his friend

After the sun and light were gone Before he found himself at home Corrinado swam, fought the waves Remembering when, a myriad of falls, behind another day

All was left one chance to fly away
just beyond his reach the plan To reunite them once again

Caught in the waves as the wind whipped on and the sand sat calmly miles below
He had to swim, to take the day Hoping to see Mulberry when he crawled to reach his getaway

All was left one chance to fly away
Just beyond his reach the plan To reunite them once again
