the sun is shining
it could be a wonderful day the children play outside while the birds sing in the sky a warm breeze moves the grass and small feet squeeze it and while a butterfly passes you hear the children laugh it's waiting in the dark

a tiny metal bar peeps out of the ground dew reflects the sunrays see me
see me
oh please see me

a stone is pushed back in the earth while a small sole pushes the metal bar a tiny flash disappears into the ground a soft click and with a hollow sound slowly it ejects - irrevocable with a swirling movement like a butterfly it's slowly climbing high it passes the knees it passes the hands

it passes the chest until it reached its high another click and a fireball appears out of a shockwave
- the eardrums break like deadly insects a swarm of glowing spikes bursts out of the red center while flying razorblades peel the last laugh off the face

- smeared with blood a firestorm burns down pieces of flesh on the red colored grass stop searching hell is already here yes we made it happen worse than any beast of prey
