Sit back and let me recall everything you said to me.
This convoluted fantasy world that you claim to see.
You'll never know until you open up your eyes.
This is, everything, I have, to say.
This is, everything, I have, to say.

You will know...
Pushing forward to find you're something more than this.
Everything you have been taught in the world will never make sense.
Will it be something you learn to live with or will you strive to be something anomalous?
This is everything that I have.
This is everything. It's everything I am.
It's not the first time that I've been here and it won't, it won't be my last.
It's not the first time that I've been here and it won't, it
won't be my last.
Making progress everyday, I will live the life that's meant for me can you say the same.

How does it feel to know you're worthless?
How does it feel to know you're worthless?
