The glass, it flows
Like a river, beneath my feet
And it glows like a beacon, calling me
To the brink I will go; tap the surface and wait
For your sign: it's a ripple, calling me

And I, I will dive, right through
Dive right down to you
Let me through this pool
Let me through to you

Can I be content?
Here it all makes sense
You've been sent from above
Take me down, my love

I stare at the world beneath my feet
I must go, for I promised we would meet
In this world that I know, it can give me much more
Tell me now, what does heaven have in store?

Diving through the seemingly solid, through the brick and the stone
I will follow you

These torrents of knowledge could bring any man to the brink of insanity
Not now...

As I stare through the glass, it grows solid beneath me Sealing away this heaven and bliss until I sleep once more
And I, I can't dive right through
Dive right down to you
Let me through this pool
Let me through to you

I am not content
Nothing here makes sense
You're not sent from above
Wake me up, my love...
