

Protest the Hero "Soft Targets Make Softer Graves"

Visit "Soft Targets Make Softer Graves" on MotoLyrics.com

Now's the time to take all your rage and your frustration and focus it in a positive way. It's time to fight but only for the democracy that has been ripped from beneath our feet. Is it ridiculous to believe that killing the innocent is murder? but it is to believe that nothing can be done. These people are not machines, they're living they're breathing they're dying they're human beings who cry "please don't kill me" in the same trembling frequency we do. Propaganda screams "have you forgotten?" in six minute intervals so loud that you can't escape them, but now I'll ask have you forgotten? about the young men in boxes, about the choking in the field, about a treaty (of a palace in the swamp) that was set to end it all? It's safe to say I'll never forget the day i first heard your voice, laced with undertones of hate and vengeance. I suppose all that matters is dulce et decorum est Pro patria mori, or at least it still acts as an effective facade to mask the burning bush's political alternative agenda. How sweet and fitting is it to die for one man's greed?

Visit Protest the Hero page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.