"The Grand Act"

Vacant eyes gleaming with rejection
How much one can take until forgiven
Preaching to the pious congregation
Like throwing pearls before swine

Pawns shifting quietly between the extremities
Tainting the will to life, depleted to insanity

Stripped from all of it's given authority
Imperfection all laid to bare
Paralyzed by one's own insecurity
Searching for a god which is no longer there

Pawns shifting quietly between the extremities

Gnawing the right to life, depleted to insanity

Struggling between body and mind, how People can not be Saved
As conclusions stare the one, mute, morose and gray

Pawns shifting quietly between the extremities
Gnawing the will to life, depleted to insanity
Silence is consent, the grand act adjourned
A cycle turning, nothing has been learned

As only doubt would set one free
