Song by Neil Finn

I might be old but I'm someone new she said I'm so sore that I could cry always in the night lay your tired arms she will have her way somehow I will still believe her it's the life I've been frightened of she said deathly silence and especially the dark feels like I am heavy and my spirit has died
one day I will come back still no end in sight though I travel far and wide a dying man is doing time thinker, soldier terrified and she will have her way
