It started on the long rout, because of the view
I wanted to drive and so did you
As we argued the first flakes of snow
Started to show

You began drinking at half past noon enter the rounds of a drunken fool
Told my brother to get a wife
Even though you knew he just came out

And not in my wildest dreams could I ever concieve of Spending time with you on christmas eve

You gave me a book on Italian cuisine
No matter how you try you never redeem
Yourself from the things that you put me through
If you only knew

We sat there in silence remembering all the fights
Watching the blinking christmas lights
And as I turned to you, I realised that you had passed out

And not in my wildest dreams could I ever concieve of
Spending time with you on christmas eve

And not in a million years could I ever concieve of Spending time with you on christmas eve
