"Conceptual Flesh"

The human body begins to fragment It's framework splits into multiple pieces creating a pool
Of Conceptual Flesh
The mind swells with dismal meditation, causing the body
To Dilute and Ache
A thirst, An itch, a hunger for existence dries up and slowly begins
To relinquish in the human mind Desire magnifies with an unsteady tread only causing apprehension
The roots of sanity are pulled from the feet
We can never reach the external world Reality, the world of perception is within our minds
