40 miles south of baker
i fell out of my car i was driving so fast that i i could not see the trees i flew through the front windshield i landed on my back i lie there on the bloody concrete i thought about the things i love there were stars the size of planets they were bigger than the clouds oh i will shine in on my small world i lay there and started singing my hands groped for my pockets reaching for the whiskey flask i heard the words of the great ones god oh might im free at last in a sheeted bed in greensburg i slept a century in my dreams i did a lot of singing i sang about the things i love

i sang about
i sang about
i sang about the things i love
i sang about
i sang about the things i love...

i fell out of my car
