I sat, in time and space
In a time where there was nobody
In a spce with no doors at all
In a room where no one's alone
In a timeless void of each-otherness
I watched and sighed against the falling stars
Counting my saved shudders
Savouring my scars

On my trip I assisted the sparks
Stroking their sons in the dark
In the wind, in the clouds of scare
Knotting wire into your hair

The sun and the moon rose hand in hand
And the moon cast a sad glimmer
IÂ´m walking through the tunnels
Unwillingly towards everything
And all - step not on the righteous path
Thread your way around the roads youÂ´ve walked

I was and was dancing seated
Listening to the sounds of entirety
Rooting out the tree of life
I saw the roots that stretched...
And stretched... and stretched
And are still stretching
