I've climbed the hill, to see you once more,
Just like I've done, so many times before,
I've reached the top, finally at last,
To visit you, just like I've done in the past.

Each year the hill, gets harder to climb,
But I'll be here to see you, one more time,
And talk to the one, that I love so,
I still don't understand, why you had to go.

I brought you,
Fourteen Roses, For the one that I love so,
Fourteen Roses, Why did you have to go?
Fourteen Roses, For the one who stole my heart,
Fourteen Roses, One for each year we've been apart.

Now the weather, has turned cool,
And everyone, thinks I'm a fool,
For climbing the long hill, to get up here,
Every holiday, of the year.

I don't care, what they think,
For it's you, I'm thinking of,
Things aren't the same, with you gone,
I sure miss you, in that lonely home.

I brought you,
Fourteen Roses, For the one that I love so,
Fourteen Roses, Why did you have to go?
Fourteen Roses, For the one who stole my heart,
Fourteen Roses, One for each year we've been
apart.

Now I must go, back down the hill,
You've left a void, no one can fill,
I just can't love another, cause I can't get over you,
I love you as much today, as the day I said I do.

We'll meet again, of this I'm sure,

I will meet you, on the other shore,
Then I will see, your smiling face,
Just like I see it now, in every place.

I won't be hard, to find,
I'll be the one, with roses in my hand,
And when we meet, on that great shore,
We'll be together, forever more.

I'll bring you,
Fourteen Roses, For the one that I love so,
Fourteen Roses, Why did you have to go?
Fourteen Roses, For the one who stole my heart,
Fourteen Roses, One for each year we've been
apart.

Fourteen Roses, For the one I love so.
