Ivory, she's a gypsy, rides the tail of a whiskey
She's headed out to welcome the sun
With my own invitation I showed up at her station
She said that she would like me to come

Thinking should I go, should I go, should I go?
And she kept singing,
"Last chance train from New Orleans"
There's a good chance she might look for me
If I hide won't stray with Ivory into the night
Ivory had eyes they were as green as mine
And we were speaking without using our tongues
Honestly Ivory, I want what your hiding
So if you want me to I will come

Thinking should I go, should I go, should I go?

And she kept singing,
