I wake up on a Sunday,
thinking that it's a Monday.
I smile, ain't got work today.
Today, my head, it hates me.
Must be the JD they gave me last night, hungover today.
And I make it out my door,
and I'm taking in fresh air,
and I just can't wait to get there, no.
And I know it is the cure,
I can't wait one minute more.

'Cause I love my London,
from the highest tower down to the water.
I love my London,
like every father loves his daughter.
If you're ever feeling down,
you can't go wrong in London town.

I've arrived,
with the sun beating down on my neck.
It's been a night out,
I'm looking like a wreck
but I'm fine... fine.
You know it feels sublime
taking a walk down South Bank by the riverside.
I've got all the time.
I'm not thinking about my steps,
I don't know where they'll take me next.
I just want to see the sites.
So through these streets I'll always roam.
I'm so proud that it's my home,
London baby never go.

'Cause I love my London,
from the highest tower down to the water.
I love my London,
like every father loves his daughter.

I love my London,
from the highest tower down to the water,

I love my London,
like every father loves his daughter.
If you're ever feeling down,
you can't go wrong in London town.
(It's Ballas)

I love my London,
from the highest tower down to the water.
I love my London,
like every father loves his daughter.(x2)

If you're ever feeling down, you can't go wrong in London town.
