it's three in the morning and i stayed up all night drowning in my words writing about you time seems to standstill since the day you left me a revolving door slamming this time so slowly you're running out you're running fast now we were just kids back then two years of my life traded for an ending like this like a love movie without a goodbye kiss why was it me with all sincerity which car drove us to drove us to this road this road of broken promises first it was broken glass that fell down from the sky so fast it hit us then she promised but it happened again
