Your words are so deafening
But actions speak louder than anything words could ever say
Your voice is so threatening;
Now a whisper in the distance

Now I'm forgetting your face, with every passing day I find a little more of me

You swear it's over now (staring at the ground)
I wish that you could say you're sorry We've probably lost by now (this bridge is burning down)
And you swear it's over now

A view condescending, you wear your true colors
And justify the hurtful things you say I can't even defend myself anymore
The tide has washed me away

Now I'm erasing your face, with every passing day I find more harmony

You swear it's over now (staring at the ground)
I wish that you could say you're sorry
We've probably lost by now (this bridge is burning
down)
And you swear it's over now
