Take it from a well-known man.
You can count all the fine performances
And hear them sayin, "It's never twice the same, baby."

Come around the bend once more
And believe in the sun's abilities.
I know he's watching and always listening to me.

The seeds come alive with the things they can grow.
He may be a talented man
And I told you, "Believe in the things that you know."
Baby, trust that you can.
Trust you can.

Come across a lifeless bore
And I wonder if he knows anything.
I feel like laughing
But I don't have to say nothing.

Open up a well-shut door
And become in the brave new scenery.
They move like switches
On all the rusted old machinery

The seeds come alive and continue to grow.
He may be a talented man
But I told you, "Believe in the things that you know."
Baby, trust that you can.
Trust you can.
