this is a tired old world i want
news from elsewhere
good news
bad news
on picture-postcards
this is a blind spot
this is an empty lot
i need a radio
i need a hilltop
i want my news from elsewhere

it is a mighty long way from here to elsewhere
uphill
downhill
wish i had a fourwheel-drive
wish i was a contender
but you are never standing by the roadside
you are never waving at me i would be rather happy here if i could tell you where i will be passing by
with a smile

t' is a funny idea that i should be from somewhere isn't it obvious
that i have never never ever been there
i'm on the look-out
i don't belong here
it would be wonderfull
if i was wrong
passing by
with a smile

(spoken words:)

In the wooden shed he found a piece of cardboard on which the previous occupant had written: "how can i please myself when i have no self to please?" "sorry, young man" -thought Burroughs- "i think you are kidding yourself. as long as you talk to yourself, you have a self. the self is a pimping, blackmailing chauffeur who gets you from here to

there on word lines."

passing by
with a smile
with a smile
yeah
