I'm flattered you could work me into you story
But you should be more careful with your allegory
You think it's clever that I can read between the lines
Baby, you still love me

Now I'm back here at your door
To apologize once more
We can end this pointless war

I never realized when we were together
I would be such a wreck without you forever
If you put down your poison pen
Then I promise to act like a gentleman

Now I'm back here at your door
To apologize once more
So we can end this pointless war

How did you know me so well?
You smile but you won't ever tell

It's you
I know what I want
It's you
I know what I want
It's you
I know what I want
It's you
