when winter goes it's like a toothache that finally subsides
light pours in like farm fresh eggs on the sunny side I cracked one open and two yolks spilled out and then I left it right there cuz I thought it must be about it must be about you

I heard two people complain about the weather today I guess even spring colours mixed all together make a grey so I put a just a little yellow on my brush and then I paint those highlights, with a gentle touch well I learned that one from you people tell me you've got yourself a lovely day for a drive and then I see all that beauty I can never touch from the inside and as I watch another day fly by I just lose myself I lose all sense of time that must be how I lost you winter's gone and my shoes are showing off all my toes

I clean my closet to make room for that old winter coat I found that dress that's too long and tight it never fit me but it fit you just right it fit you just right
