Save me a place,
Down in your heart;
But don't let the road,
Take you too far from me.

And late in the daylight,
Late in the day;
Turn your head slowly,
Turn it away.

Come on and call me,
When you need me;
But please believe me,
Believe me that you're standing on the edge of
something good.
And it's the hardest thing you ever had to do.
Truth be told, you're begging on your knees;
Singing, please don't let it, please don't let it be.

And if you get lonely,
Part of the time.
If you start losing,
Part of your mind.

Down in a mystery,
You live and you learn.
You're breaking so easy,
Everywhere you turn.

Come on,
And call me,
When you need me,
But please believe me.

Believe me, that you're standing on the edge of
something good.
But it's the hardest thing you ever had to do.
Truth be told, you're begging on your knees;
Singing, please don't let it, please don't let it be.

Cause I came around for everything I never told you.
And how could I know that you were leaving?

And these days I'm falling or I'm stuck inside myself,
And I can't see it, but I believe it.

Oh, no you're standing on the edge.

And I'm still standing.
And I'm still standing.

You know you're standing on the edge of something good.
And I'm still standing.
And I'm still standing.
