by the time i get to arizona you'll be falling from my grace evergreens will lie about the season as the daylight gives a chase i would buy the planetarium so no stars would fall a sunset lost on me is not your loss cuz your heart beats

by the time you get the invitation i'll be spoiling the surprise talking loud about forever as the desert fingers rise can you hear the wheel sigh? can winter lovers justify this fogged up winter green and every breath held in between?

leaving home but being careful not to leave too much behind lighting out despite our saddest faces we can be in four places at a time can you tell i've lost my intuition? like i need it anymore six bits for facts and plastic bubbles

i have never felt so sure bless the road side i'll keep you untied so says the parking brake the thing you miss is no mistake leaving home but being careful

lighting out to find our finest graces we can be in four places at a time.

i had a plan

i had sense enough i counted it like promises to myself after centuries of bad luck and open air i found the one to keep
found the one to keep
