You could build a wall around you
Now no one would blame you
Everyone would sigh and sympathize for What you've been through

You could count the feelings
That he walked on as a reason to let it in
Or count it as a ribbon in the race
That you've been running when you win

But if it's love that you're playing for bet it all
There's no way to save your pride
Or leave a cushion for yourself should you fall
If it's love that you're playing for play to win
A heart is only broken when it loses the desire to try again

But you could build a wall around you
Now no one would blame you
Those who gather round would not look down
Although they're seeing through

You could let the sorrow that you're feeling
Be tomorrow's point of view
Or you could let the feeling that you're hoping for
Be what's guiding you

So if it's love that you're playing for ah bet it all
There's no way to save your pride
Or leave a cushion for yourself should you fall
If it's love that you're playing for play to win
A heart is only broken when it loses the desire to try
again
You could build a wall around you now
