I was wrong
I should have come along Those were lazy, hasty days

You were strong you were the singing of the song but I stayed, you walked away

I sat down in the summer evening and waited for the moment to arise It's easier to handle all your friends than to keep just one love alive

The gras was wet empty cans and cigarettes we kept drinking, sinking deep

You were gone twice as distant as the sun
I kept thinking I should sleep

But one thing that I learned from you is how to slowly talk away the night how come it's easier to handle all your friends than to keep just one love alive

Oh, how come we can't afford the price Oh, how come we lose the ones we like

It's a fact
I'll never get you back Still the summer haunts your name

I was wrong
I should have come along
But I stumbled there and stayed

So once again I've done it and I wonder:
Will I ever get it right When it's much easier to handle all your friends than to keep just one love alive

one love alive
