That train doesn't come here anymore
And I won't hear her footsteps coming through the door
I had so many chances but I threw them all away
And that train won't be coming here today

She tried to help me find her
Gave me every chance she could
To be her sunrise lover man
And learn to treat her good

She walked away one hundred times
She came back ninety-nine
But not this time she's gone away
And now she won't be mine

Cuz that train doesn't come here anymore
And I won't hear her footsteps coming through the door
I had so many chances but I threw them all away
And that train won't be coming here today
I still can hear her tremblin' voice
As she began to cry
She packed her bags just like before
And said her last goodbye

She closed the door and walked away
Just like she did before
And now I want just one more chance
To hold her evermore

But that train doesn't come here anymore
And I won't hear her footsteps coming through the door
I had so many chances but I threw them all away
And that train won't be coming here today

I had so many chances but I threw them all away
And that train won't be coming here today
